The Human Comedy is a 1943 novel by William Saroyan. It originated as a 240-page film script written for MGM. Saroyan was planning to produce and direct the film, but he was dropped from the project either because the script was too long or because a short film he directed as a test did not pass muster—or both.

Saroyan's THE HUMAN COMEDY is a highly patriotic, highly sentimental, vintage war-time narrative: it gently treats, in part, the tragic telegrams from the War Department that far too many American families received during the WW 2 period. The writing is particularly strong in the final third of the novel.

The Human Comedy, sentimental novel of life in a small California town by William Saroyan, published in 1943. The narrator of the story, 14-year-old Homer Macauley, lives with his widowed mother, his sister Bess, and his little brother Ulysses; his older brother has left home to fight in World War II. While family relationships and domestic situations are in the foreground, the events of the outside world, including the cataclysmic war, are never entirely out of the picture.

The Human Comedy | novel by Saroyan | Britannica

An absolutely stunning novel -- arguably Saroyan's best. For those unfamiliar with this incredible prose, "The Human Comedy" is a good place to start. Other reviewers here have posted detailed readings of the work, and I simply wanted to register my unqualified praise for this novel and Saroyan's work in general.

Saroyan's debut collection of stories. A timeless selection of brilliant short stories that won William Saroyan a position among the foremost, most widely popular writers of America when it first appeared in 1934. With the greatest of ease William Saroyan flew across the literary skies in 1934 with the publication of The Daring Young Man on the Flying Trapeze and Other Stories. One of the first American writers to describe the immigrant experience in the U.S., Saroyan created characters who were Armenians, Jews, Chinese, Poles, Africans, and the Irish. The title story touchingly portrays the thoughts of a very young writer, dying of starvation. All of the tales were written during the great depression and reflect, through pathos and humor, the mood of the nation in one of its greatest times of want.

Eleven of William Saroyan's most delightful tales, Fresno Stories springs straight from the source of the author's vision--"the archetypal Armenian families who inhabit Saroyan country, in and around Fresno, California." (Chicago Tribune)

This is the most complete and generous sampling of the first half of an indispensable American writer's career.
